

The Center for Early Childhood Education at Eastern Connecticut State University is pleased to announce the release of "Selecting Classroom Materials and Planning the Schedule," the third segment of the Guiding Young Children's Behavior series of training videos. This segment looks at how both materials and the daily schedule can affect children's behavior, and discusses why creating balance in the classroom promotes a positive and productive learning environment. Early childhood professionals will hear about a few key principals to keep in mind when carefully selecting classroom materials and designing the daily schedule in order to guide children's behavior.
